Sorry one other question – is it clear if the OPP and OPS are revoking CVOR licenses under the EMA or the Provincial Emergency Act?

If its being referred to the Ontario MTO, id imagine its through the latter act?

It's related to the police service of jurisdiction, in this case OPP and OPS.
Many thanks!

Thanks Carly for the updates from RCMP

Is the CVOR revocation usually done by another institution and not the RCMP? Or is that on a case by case basis?

Apologies for the delay, just received the below from the RCMP:

- The RCMP was not involved in the CVOR revocation for Personal. Ontario Provincial Police and the Ottawa Police Service were responsible for the towing portion of the operation, working in close consultation and coordination with the Ontario Ministry of Transportation.
- RCMP understands that the CVOR revocation does apply to an entire company/fleet, and not just to the individual truck/driver present at the blockade.
- As the policing operations continue, the company should be reaching out directly to the Ministry of Transportation, the Ontario Provincial Police and the Ottawa Police Service for more information.

Just confirming, question is with RCMP folks who are engaged on convoy work. They will get back to us as soon as they can.

Many thanks

Subject: URGENT: Personal Info. [REDACTED] License Revoked

Importance: High

Hi Carly,

Hope you are doing well.

We heard today from a trucking company in Ontario, [REDACTED], that had one of its truck drivers joined the protests in Ottawa, with the company logo on the truck.

After being towed away and having the truck impounded this past weekend in Ottawa, apparently the RCMP revoked the CVOR licenses for the entire [REDACTED], of which there are 40 trucks. The licenses have been revoked for 7 days, until Saturday February 26.

Our understanding is that each rig is operated and owned by each driver, with the plates under the [REDACTED] name; in essence they are leased out from the company itself.

Can we confirm with RMCP:

- Did the RCMP revoke the license of a trucker drive from [REDACTED] or was it another level of law enforcement
- If they did, did this apply to entire company/fleet or just to the individual truck/driver present at the blockade?
- Are there other incidences were entire fleets, not directly involved in the blockades, have had their licenses revoked ?

This is an urgent request and would appreciate an update later today if possible.

Appreciate your help.
